LenguApp

LenguApp · quick guide for testers (version 0.3.0)

What it is. An app to practise a language one week at a time (German or English, A2 to C2). It is not a course: it's for consolidating what you already learned in one. It works with no internet, no account and no data collection. It's in testing, and your feedback helps a lot.

This is on purpose (not a bug)

What you see	Why
Only A2 and B1 can be translated into your language	At B2, C1 and C2 the sheet is always in the language you're learning. Vocabulary and expressions are translated, in the Library and in Saved.
Words in another language between « »	Any fragment in a language other than the surrounding text goes in angle quotes. If you see one unmarked, that is a bug: tell us.
A skill or a topic comes back later	On purpose: skills reappear several times a year at a different depth.
Special Review weeks	Four times a year there's a review week, in a different format.
The weekend challenge only appears on Saturday and Sunday	It's speaking out loud, not repeating the mission: the task with its minutes on top; below, topic, skill, conditions and phrases. It starts switched off every time you open the app. Nothing is saved.
The app name and «About» are in Settings	The main screen stays free for the content.
Welcome screen	The first time you pick language and level, and it explains what LenguApp is. You can see it again from Settings.
Saved, and import/export	Saved shows the same as the Library. You can export to Anki or make a backup and import it later; you choose the file yourself at that moment.
Skills in the Library	A read-only list: tap a skill to open its week.
Verbs in the Library	Lists the verbs of the language, from every level; under each one you see the lowest level it appears at and, in German, the case or preposition it takes (von + Dat). The phrases it's used in also appear (die Frage stellen), each with its own star; a verb that only exists inside phrases (stellen) has none. You filter by class, not by level. The search box stays at the top and also looks at translations and phrases: «Frage» finds stellen.

No stats, streaks or progress	By design. The app only stores your stars (Saved) and your settings.
The voice-conversation prompt for an AI exists only in English B2 and C1	It’s a trial. The prompt for an AI to correct your writing is there at every level.
The AI prompts are always in the language you’re learning	So the AI answers in that language, even if the app is in yours.
The PDF sheet comes out in the language you’re learning, on a single page	It’s to show to whoever teaches you that language.
German has no «ß»	Swiss spelling is used: «ss».
Spanish is neutral and uses «tú»	«Usted» only appears in phrases from formal situations, which is the thing being taught.
Audio works, for now only in German	Tap the speaker next to a word or expression (in the examples, only some have it): it’s a synthetic voice. One plays at a time. There’s none in English yet.
There’s content for 2026 (from week 41) and for 2027	The rest will be added over time.
You can choose the colours and the type	Settings has four themes (Paper, Terracotta, Sea, Graphite) and, on Android 12 or later, one that follows your wallpaper. Also three typefaces: the system one, Reading and Clear.
Some signs (↔, ✗, →, ₂) appear in another typeface	Reading and Clear don’t include those glyphs, so the phone draws them with the system one.
Icon and splash screen	Still provisional: they’re being redesigned. The splash screen has no logo yet.

We do want to hear about

Bugs in the app or in the texts, words in another language without « », translations that sound odd or wrong (especially French, Italian and Portuguese, which a native speaker hasn’t reviewed yet), and anything that isn’t clear.

How to tell us

Tell us: 1) which screen you were on, 2) which language and level you were learning, 3) which language the app was in, 4) what you expected and what happened, and 5) a screenshot if you can. The version is shown in «About».
